

ART<sub>of</sub> CHOICE

By Maria Vogel
May 1, 2018

Artist Interview: DANIELLE GOTTESMAN

[...]

Can you tell us a little bit about your exhibition Elevations?

Elevations is a large solo exhibition of works inspired by architectural imagery, located on the ground floor of 90 Morton – currently a building site in downtown Manhattan. The show was curated by Lolita Cros.

My relationship to 90 Morton is quite special. It's an old industrial building in the West Village, now a development of luxury condominiums which is still under construction. In 2015, I was hired as a photographer to take pictures of the site, even before construction started. When the development company discovered my work in sculpture and interest in architecture as subject matter, the opportunity to exhibit exhibition was presented to me.

There is a good number of works in the show– mainly sculptures, but also photographs and etchings. There are a few photographs of early construction, works from my Vistemboir project, sculptures from my Bar Bones installation, and of course, the highlight of the show Elevations.

Elevations is a series of life-size sculptures, inspired by the floorplan sections of the future residential development, 90 Morton.